The Immaculate Conception Epping

Sixth Sunday of the Year

Sunday 16th February 2014

Dear friends,

Christianity offers us a very straightforward directive for happiness and peace of mind: keep God's commandments and try to do what he tells us. For many the word sin is considered unacceptable and out of date, a limitation on personal freedom and self expression. Yet, plain experience clearly demonstrates that where the law of the Lord is infringed much unhappiness ensues. In the psalm today we make the response: they are happy who follow God's law. Doing what is asked of us more often than not entails considerable sacrifice and self discipline. If the centre of my own being is Ego I am selfish and self absorbed: my own needs and desires trump everything else. If I make a genuine attempt to place the Lord at the centre of my life then I am enabled to reach out to others and to consider their needs. Sin and selfishness go together: similarly sacrifice is linked to service. Our blessed Lord Jesus is the supreme example of service and sacrifice and it is he who teaches us to pray: thy will be done.

I will be away on retreat from Monday to Friday during the coming week. Clergy are expected to make a spiritual retreat annually. It provides us a time to take a serious look at our own lives to see whether we really practise what we preach.

God bless you always
