The Immaculate Conception

33rd Sunday in Ordinary Time

16th November 2014

Dear friends,

people of genius are in short supply but every human being, created in God's image, has been gifted by him in one way or another. If anyone says I am useless he or she is insulting our creator. The Catholic Church encourages us to work for and to promote the common good. In order to do this it is vital that each of us recognises what we can offer to the community. It is equally important that we discern the gifts of others and encourage them to put those talents to good use. To stunt the growth of others is to be guilty of envy or jealousy. To let our own gifts lie dormant is to be guilty of laziness or sloth. Today's parable of the talents praises generosity of spirit: it also condemns reluctance to put to good use what God has given us.

Last week I had a wonderful few days in Rome in anticipation of my forthcoming golden jubilee. I was one of 52 priests for all over the country. Some were keeping sixty years of priesthood and the rest of us either forty or fifty years of ministry. We were guests of the Venerable English College and stayed at their beautiful villa of Palazzola situated in Lake Albano just outside Rome. The oldest in the group was a sprightly 90 year old. The ten diamond jubilarians had the privilege of concelebrating Mass with Pope Francis in his private chapel. On our final evening we were entertained to a banquet hosted by the College which currently has 40 young men in training for the priesthood. All in all it was an inspiring experience.

God bless you always
